Chief Pratt and Detectives Sheets and Gillespie.

CONVERSATION WITH JONES

AND STATEMENTS BY STOUT THEIR PRINCIPAL THEME.

Jones' Overcoat Sleeves and Pockets and Glove Highly Perfumed to Obsolete Odor of Powder, the Police Say—William Kraut Heard Two Shots—Adjudged to Monday.

The principal witnesses in the Jones-Stout shooting case yesterday were Chief of Police Pratt, Detectives Sheets and Gillespie and William Kraut. The chief's testimony, which was corroborated by the detectives, was in the main the same as he gave at the preliminary hearing, according to statements made by Jones when he was arrested and to statements made by Stout an hour or two after he was shot. The only new point developed was that when Jones was taken to the police station it was found according to statements made by Jones when he was arrested and to statements made by Stout an hour or two after he was shot. The only new point developed was that when Jones was taken to the police station it was found according to statements made by Jones when he was arrested and to statements made by Stout an hour or two after he was shot.

Dr. Pinkerton will probably be the next witness for the prosecution and his testimony will be interesting, both as to the description of Stout's wounds and to statements made by Stout regarding the shooting.

Court adjourned at 5 o'clock yesterday and further hearing of the case was set for Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

KRAUT HEARD THE SHOTS.

William Kraut, in answer to Mr. Hay Van Cott, said he was at the South First West street, near Sixth South street between State and Main at a little after 6 o'clock on the evening of Nov. 9. When he was there he heard a shot fired and after going about fifty feet further he heard another shot. Witness walked on to Main street and saw a man running across Main street in a southerly direction. Witness crossed the street and saw a man running across Main street in a southerly direction. Witness crossed the street and saw a man running across Main street in a southerly direction.

CHIEF OF POLICE PRATT.

Chief of Police Pratt, replying to Mr. Putnam, said he was called to investigate the shooting about 7 o'clock on the night on which it occurred. Went to Stout's house and saw Stout's wound, a small hole on the left side, a bullet wound, the clothing was powder-burnt. Witness went to talk with Stout and said to him that he was a doctor and that he would treat his wound.

and he said: "Does Stout say I did it?" He leaned back in his chair and said he did not know. He replied that he did not know. He replied that he did not know.

Continuing, the chief said that he examined Jones' overcoat and searched the pockets. His gloves, the sleeves of his overcoat and his overcoat pockets were highly perfumed. When Dr. Pinkerton came, witness took him aside with Jones and in the presence of the doctor told Jones that Stout accused him of having shot him, and that Stout said he fully recognized him. Witness informed Jones in the presence of Dr. Pinkerton, because the doctor was present with witness when Stout said that Jones shot him.

The bank examiner and Jones had a private consultation for a few minutes, and after that time Jones said to Jones: "Why don't you tell me what Stout said?" "I don't know," said Jones. "I don't know," said Jones. "I don't know," said Jones.

Cross-examination. Cross-examined by Mr. Brown. "At what hour was the wind the highest that night?"

"It was high at 7 o'clock, and by 11 or 12 o'clock it was not so strong." "The later you made those experiments at the billboard it would be the better for seeing them?"

"At what time did you make the experiments?" "About 1 o'clock that night, and another time was made in the evening." "How long had you been waiting for Jones before you arrested him?"

"Fifteen or twenty minutes. We went to his house and waited for him. There we waited for the street car. I didn't know Jones, but the motorman on the car pointed him out." "What time did you see him?"

"He was at the shooting of Stout." "Mostly about the shooting of Stout." "You told him you had seen Stout?"

"Yes, I told him I had seen him and had a conversation with him." "Did he search at the police station?"

"He was searched on the sidewalk after he came off the car. I didn't search him, but he was searched by the police." "Did he ask you at the police station if he had a warrant for his arrest?"

"Yes, he did. He asked me to send for Chipman, the president of the bank." "Yes, but it wasn't sent for several days. I went to see him at his house." "You wanted to get into the bank?"

"Yes, I wanted to find what evidence I could. I believed from Jones' demand and Stout's statement that he had shot Stout." "When you accused him of it, did you have a person who saw you do it, what then?"

"What did he say then?" "He persisted that he hadn't done it and he had a peculiar look in his face, he didn't look like a man who was guilty." "What is the correct way for an innocent man to look when you falsely accuse him?"

mistaken the word "direct" in the witness' answer for the word "correct," hence he replied that he did not know. "You said his demand made you think he was guilty?"

"What did you expect him to do?" "An innocent man accused of shooting his friend and that friend supposed to be dying, would be asked to be taken to his friend's bedside as quickly as possible." "You thought Jones was guilty, and you have been hunting up evidence ever since to prove him so?"

"Yes, that is correct." "And you wanted to keep the knowledge of the evidence from Jones and his counsel?"

"I did. I wanted to keep it from his counsel. Mr. Brown (interrupting)—You can get your venom against his counsel off at some other time." "I have no venom," said the chief.

Counsel here read extracts from the Deseret News of an interview with Chief Pratt respecting his reason for wanting to keep Stout's name out of the report was substantially correct.

Channel then proceeded to question Chief Pratt in regard to the statements made by Bank Examiner Wightman regarding Hedges having done the shooting.

"Jones made a little map to enable you to find Hedges," asked counsel. "Yes." "Did you ask him to do so?"

"I don't know, I may have done so." "Jones said that he didn't accuse Hedges?"

"Where did he say Hedges lived?" "In a little court near Jones' house, near Main and Sixth South streets." "When you accused Jones he simply said 'I didn't shoot Stout'?"

"That was the first time." "You told him that Stout said he shot him and that you believed it?" "I don't think I did believe it."

"That was the time he said that Stout was a damned liar?" "Yes." "The witness was then asked about the experiments he made at the billboard from the place Stout was shot. He had any change of modification being made in his original testimony on that subject?"

"Did you ask Stout, when you went to his house that night, if he knew who shot him, and did he hesitate a moment and then say no?" "Yes." "By Mr. Putnam: 'Did he say anything further about it the first time you were there that evening?'"

"He stated he didn't know who shot him." "You had a further conversation with him on that subject?" "Yes, he said he didn't know who shot him." "What was that further conversation?"

DEPARTURE OF THE TROOPS

THREE COMPANIES LEAVE FOR THE COAST TODAY.

Next Wednesday Two More Companies Will Go—Will Leave But a Handful of Men at the Post.

All was bustle and stir at Fort Douglas yesterday. Barracks and officers' quarters alike were scenes of confusion. It was worse than a May house cleaning; it was the tearing up attendant on an exodus.

For today three companies of the Twenty-fourth Infantry leave the post for stations in the northwest. Most of the big barracks will be left empty. The commanding officer and the staff, go to San Francisco to take station at the Presidio. This will leave the barracks to be occupied by three companies of the regiment—a mere handful of men, compared to the force which has been stationed there in past years. Tomorrow next two officers, together with the commanding officer and the staff, go to San Francisco to take station at the Presidio. This will leave the barracks to be occupied by three companies of the regiment—a mere handful of men, compared to the force which has been stationed there in past years.

Yesterday there was scarcely an idle man about the post. The whole garrison was busy. The barracks were being cleaned and the quarters were being packed. The commanding officer and the staff, go to San Francisco to take station at the Presidio. This will leave the barracks to be occupied by three companies of the regiment—a mere handful of men, compared to the force which has been stationed there in past years.
